King County
Elections

The Seattle Indian Health Board Elders Group meets every Wednesday afternoon in the Leschi neighborhood of Seattle. The day of the accessible voting unit demonstration by the King County Elections Outreach Team, a group of nearly 20 elders were gathered to enjoy lunch and listen to the presentation on the new equipment that they can utilize when casting their ballot.

Members of the audience were fascinated with the equipment during the demonstration and enjoyed trying the machines for the first time. They were looking forward to using the equipment in the upcoming fall elections.

Chartered in 1970, the Seattle Indian Health Board (SIHB) is a non-profit, multi-service community health center. Serving the healthcare needs of American Indians and Alaska natives in the greater Seattle/King County region of Western Washington State, the SIHB provides health and pharmacy services, pre-natal care and nutritional advice to the community.
